(By Dr. L. H. Merrill.) For many years food chemists have been accustomed to think of foods as consisting essentially of proteins, fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts, and water.

It has been assumed that an adequate diet could be made up of these alone provided that they were supplied in sufficient amounts, in proper proportions, and in palatable forms. Within a few years evidence has been rapidly accumulating which tends to show that an adequate diet must include a sixth class of oodstuffs, the vitamins. Some of the reasons for believing this are: When young rate are fed upon a mix-ture of the five food stuffs first named, supplied from ordinary sources, they make good growth, breed normally, and are apparently in good health. When, however, the proteins, fats, and carbohydrates of the food are carefully purified, the growth of young animals is checked, and they display very evident signs of defective nutrition. If a very small allowance of milk is now added to the diet, normal growth and functions

We have all wanted to know, for lo these many years, just where the Garden of Eden was situated, and to visit it, if possible, just to get a taste of the apples raised there, which seemed to have had more fuddle to them than any little pale vellow three-sided cider apples ever grown in the state of Maine; also to get a whack at any snakes that might be there, just for what their primal ancestor did to Mother Eve. By the way, can it be supposed that snakes and cider apples had anything in common in the days of Adam and Eve? They do now; but one generally partakes of the apoles, or the juice thereof, before he sees makes, which reverses the Bible story. But speculation aside, there is a man who thinks he knows where this original Supper and dance at Odd Fellows' Garden of Eden was situated. According to the official census for the last decade, the English family has decreased about nine per cent-that is, from 4.15 persons in 1911 to 3 79 persons in 1921. This has given some concern that the sun never sets on their domin-ions, therefore with all this land for homesites they could follow the Biblical injunction to "multiply and increase" without let or hindrance. But, it seems even this vast territory can be populated to the extent of feeling crowded, which is the reason assigned for the shortage in the baby crop. That is, families de crease because of economic pressure. When the dinner pail is empty the owners practice birth control. England is not the only country which is feeling the pinch of contraction. United States is in the same boat. Although we are allowing emigrants to enter, thousands of our own people are emigrating north to Canada, and this same economic pres-sure decreased our families from 1910, when the average was 45 persons, to 43 persons in 1920, a decrease of 4.4 per

FIRST OF GREAT SEAFARERS Vikings May Be Said to Have Pos sessed Truly Uncanny Knowledge of the Ocean.

The Vikings were not only great warriors, but they were equally distinguished as maritime explorers. "They were so vigorous in their activities, so dauntless and daring, such genuinely strenuous shipmen, that they were bound to do great things, or fail where none could have succeeded," said El. Keble Chatterton, in "Ships and Ways of Other Days." And Doctor Nansen reminds one that "they had neither compass nor astronomical instruments, nor any appliances of our time for finding their position at sea; they could only sail by the sun, moon and stars, and it seems incomprehensible how for days and weeks, when these were invisible, they were able to find their course through fog and bad weather. But they found it, and the open craft of the Norwegian Vikings, with their square sails, fared north and west over the whole ocean. It was not till 500 years later that the ships of other nations were to make their way to the same regions."

How to Make Shoes Last Longer. The soles of shoes can be made to last much longer if ordinary varnish is applied to them. When the shoes are new, or have just been resoled, apply the varnish to the soles. Allow an interval for drying, and then give them a second coat. When this has become hard, give them still another coat. The whole operation will not take very long, as varnish dries more quickly on leather than it does on wood. Be quite sure that the varnish is set before attempting to wear the shoes. After a few days the varnish will wear in certain places on the soles, so that it will pay to touch these spots up again and leave them overnight. The application of varnish has the additional advantage of making leather absolutely waterproof. For this reason it is a good plan when putting on the varnish to put a little on the part where the upper joins

HOMEMAKERS' COLUMN.

Learn the Knack of Baking Custards. How often do you serve baked custard? Is it one of your frequent des-serts, or something which you make only occasionally because you are never quite sure how it will turn out? It is true that too often the baked custard served falls far below the standard. The reason that the baked custard is such a stumbling block to so many housewives may be traced to one of two conditions can be easily avoided.

Custards should be used much more than they are. Not only are they easy to prepare—which is, we all admit, a big point—but, more important still. they are nutritious if properly made, For this reason they are often given to invalida and children and will prove boon to the mother who finds it difficu to get her patient or her children to take eggs or milk.

The two chief ingredients of a custard are eggs and milk, and it is the proportion in which they are used which deter mines the consistency of the custard, for it is the coagulation or thickening of the proteins of the eggs which thickens the custard. So, unless sufficient eggs are used, the custard will not "set. Institute experience has shown that one egg to one cupful of milk is the correct proportion if individual custards are be ing made, while six eggs to one quart of milk are necessary if one desires to make one large custard. The other ingredients—the sweetening and flavoring—are a matter of taste, and so may be varied to suit the individual preference. The actual preparation of the baked custard is simple in the extreme. For individual custards to serve six, break four eggs into a bowl and beat slightly Long beating is not necessary, for th eggs are used as a thickening agent and not to lighten the mixture. Next, add one-fourth cupful of sugar and one-half mix thoroughly.

Soften a little butter with a wooden spoon, and with a piece of crumpled tis sue paper grease lightly, but well, six custard cups. By buttering the custard cups, it is possible to unmold the cus tards with ease. Now pour in the cus tard mixture, filling the cups to within about one-quarter inch from the top. I desired, a few gratings of nutmeg or bit of coconut may be sprinkled over the top of each. Place the cups carefully in a shallow pan containing about one-half inch of warm water. The custards are Custards are one of the hardest things care, even an amateur may secure per fect results. In order to secure a cus tard which is firm enough to set, and a the same time is smooth in texture, it i absolutely essential that it be cooked a temperature low enough to prevent its ooiling. For it is high temperature which curdle egg and milk mixtures. s for this reason that they are placed i a pan containing water. Place them an oven which registers 325° F. and bake about forty minutes, being sure that the emperature of the oven does not go any nigher. Then test the custards to see they are done. The heat, of course, penetrates -to the

to bake properly. However, with a little enter last of all, so test the center of the custards lightly with the tip of the finger to see if they are firm, or test with a silver knife—the latter method being nore generally accurate. First, dip the clean, the custard is done, but if the blade of the knife is coated, further cooking is necessary. A custard which is cooked too long will whey off, so as soon as the knife comes out clean, remove from the oven and cool at once by setting in a pan of cold water. When very cold and firm, turn out of the molds

Custards may be served in a variety of ways. They are delicious plain, but if desired they may be served with sliced fresh fruit such as oranges or bananas or with berries. A pleasing change is to serve them with sweetened, thickened fruit juices or with a caramel sauce. For one large custard allow six eggs to minutes, or until done. For Caramel Custard place eight table poonfuls of sugar and one-half cupfu f water in a saucepan and cook quickly without stirring, until the sirup become brittle when dropped in cold water. Pour immediately into a dry mold or pudding dish, shaking the mold well to coat the entire inner surface. Break four eggs, reserving the whites of two, and beat well. Scald one pint of milk,

TIGERS YIELD MANY CHARMS Natives of Indo-China Make Many Uses of the "Lord of the

The teeth and claws of a tiger are sed by the natives of Indo-China as good-luck charms, watch charms, o necklaces, and the teeth are used to cure dog bites. They are filed down and when the powder thus secured is dissolved in water, it is an infallible remedy, they believe. A remarkable belief is that if one makes a cigarette holder out of the canine tooth of a tiger that has eaten a man, one can see the image of the victim, its completeness depending upon the degree to which the smoke has colored the tooth. The natives carefully clean and macerate the nerves of a tiger in alcohol. The resulting brew is an elixir of long life. If one eat tiger's liver or tiger's heart, one's courage in battle will know no bounds. Among the Mois, after a tiger has been cooked, its skull and lower jaw are broken and the pleces buried separately, to keep the lord of the jungle's ghost from bringing disturbance and disaster upon the inhabitants of the village. The whiskers the teeth, and the claws are very much sought after. Ground into fine dust and dissolved in water, the whiskers make a supposedly virulent poison.
